

Investigative Discourse Analysis

ADVANCED TRAINING FOR INTERVIEWING PROFESSIONALS

"The close and systematic study of the basic linking components of spoken or written communication"

About this course:

Within the program, all concepts presented will allow for the participants to "do" in order to enhance the learning experience.

Actual statements, transcripts, letters and emails will be utilized, analyzed and expanded.

The course involves the presentation and application of information related to the analysis process of statements, transcripts, or other textual documentation related to an inquiry.

A Course Announcement from Don Rabon

April 17 – 19, 2013, Raleigh, NC

- The systematic analysis of written discourse: statements, transcripts, emails, letters, etc., can serve to assist in the assessment of interviewee veracity, provide the foundation for the planning for a subsequent interview as well as identify the critical, related areas that require further inquiry.
- Often, written discourse relevant to an inquiry is only seen as a piece of paper to be filed. It is thought to be only useful at face value - as a record, sworn statement, or archive. In Investigative Discourse Analysis the participant learns how these documents can be put to work as investigative-inquiry decision-making tools and as veracity indicators that can serve to carry the process to conclusion.

The course will be conducted by Don Rabon, CFE.

The session will be held at the First Citizens Corporate Center in Raleigh, NC. The fee is $499 per participant. Three slots from any single organization allows for a fourth slot at no charge. Be certain of this: the three-day session is hands-on, highly structured and demanding. The content and delivery structure address linguistic, interpersonal communication skills and techniques that go beyond what is typically found in an interview setting.

These techniques are designed for "in the seat" and "on your feet" applications. This is not a program wherein a participant can manage to breathe for three days and successfully complete the course.

Participants will demonstrate their assimilation of the information presented. As is noted on the certificate: "You paid for the training. You earned your certificate".

CPE credit will be given to those successfully completing the session.

What can you expect if you sign up?

You will never be more than sixty minutes away from a hands-on, “in-the-pool” practical.

You will find there is no shallow end to the pool.

You will be required to perform, articulate and defend your performance.

You will critique and in turn, be critiqued.

You will enjoy a written exam at the beginning of each day.

You will find that trepidation is not an option.

You will succeed if you strive.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of the course, the participant will:

- Obtain an exact word-for-word statement from a subject of suitable length to perform analysis.
- Perform an analysis of a previously obtained statement, transcript, or other form of discourse and establish the elements necessary for amplifying the content of the discourse.
- Apply the appropriate questioning procedures necessary to have the subject expand upon items and areas identified by the analysis of the discourse.
